O God, Who on this day revealed
Your Only Begotten Son to the nations
by the guidance of a star, grant in Your Mercy that we, who know You already by faith, may be brought to behold the beauty of Your sublime Glory.

The Spiritual Testament of Pope Emeritus Benedict XVI My Spiritual Testament

When, at this late hour of my life, I look back on the decades I have wandered through, I see first of all how much reason I have to give thanks. Above all, I thank God Himself, the Giver of all good gifts, Who has given me life and guided me through all kinds of confusion; Who has always picked me up when I began to slip, Who has always given me anew the Light of His countenance. In retrospect, I see and understand that even the dark and arduous stretches of this path were for my salvation and that He guided me well in those very stretches.

I thank my parents, who gave me life in difficult times and prepared a wonderful home for me with their love, which shines through all my days as a bright light until today. My father's clear-sighted faith taught us brothers and sisters to believe and stood firm as a guide in the midst of all my scientific knowledge; my mother's heartfelt piety and great kindness remain a legacy for which I cannot thank her enough.

My sister has served me selflessly and full of kind concern for decades; my brother has always paved the way for me with the clear-sightedness of his judgements, with his powerful determination, and with the cheerfulness of his heart; without this ever-new going ahead and going along, I would not have been able to find the right path.

I thank God from the bottom of my heart for the many friends, men and women, whom He has always placed at my side; for the co-workers at all stages of my path; for the teachers and students He has given me. I gratefully entrust them all to His goodness. And I would like to thank the Lord for my beautiful home in the Bavarian foothills of the Alps, in which I was able to see the splendor of the Creator Himself shining through time and again. I thank the people of my homeland for allowing me to experience the beauty of faith time and again. I pray that our country will remain a country of faith and I ask you, dear compatriots, not to let your faith be distracted. Finally, I thank God for all the beauty I was able to experience during the various stages of my journey, but especially in Rome and in Italy, which has become my second home.

I ask for forgiveness from the bottom of my heart from all those whom I have wronged in some way.

What I said earlier of my compatriots, I now say to all who were entrusted to my service in the Church: Stand firm in the faith! Do not be confused! Often it seems as if science — on the one hand, the natural sciences; on the other, historical research (especially the exegesis of the Holy Scriptures) — has irrefutable insights to offer that are contrary to the Catholic faith.

I have witnessed from times long past the changes in natural science and have seen how apparent certainties against the faith vanished, proving themselves not to be science but philosophical interpretations only apparently belonging to science — just as, moreover, it is in dialogue with the natural sciences that faith has learned to understand the limits of the scope of its affirmations and thus its own specificity.

For sixty years now, I have accompanied the path of theology, especially biblical studies, and have seen seemingly unshakeable theses collapse with the changing generations, which turned out to be mere hypotheses: the liberal generation (Harnack, Jülicher, etc.), the existentialist generation (Bultmann, etc.), the Marxist generation.

I have seen, and see, how, out of the tangle of hypotheses, the reasonableness of faith has emerged and is emerging anew. Jesus Christ is truly the Way, the Truth, and the Life — and the Church, in all her shortcomings, is truly His Body.

Finally, I humbly ask: pray for me, so that the Lord may admit me to the Eternal Dwellings, despite all my sins and shortcomings. For all those entrusted to me, my heartfelt prayer goes out day after day.

Benedict XVI: A Tribute from The Catholic Thing Blog

Benedictus qui venit in nomine Domini Blessed Is He Who Comes in the Name of the Lord by Robert Royal

We expected, because of his advanced age and notices from the Vatican, that Benedict XVI was near his entry into eternity. But as always happens when someone dies — let alone a beloved teacher, scholar, pastor, and pope — when the day actually comes, it's still a shock. And changes things forever.

Joseph Ratzinger made such large contributions to the Church and the world that his name and his legacy will now enter into the great cultural heritage of the Catholic faith, permanent matter for reflection about numerous things, human and divine.

There were large public moments in his life that made an enormous difference to recent decades. He was accused in some quarters, for example, of having been a progressive at Vatican II, having “gone over to the Dark Side” during the student protests of the 1960s. A serious examination of the facts shows that this is simply mistaken.

Ratzinger's thought moved quietly, calmly, consistently at a depth that was not fundamentally changed by social turmoil. His great steadiness alone was a valued point of reference that will be sorely missed.

His radical students respected — and praised — him for that, even as he came to recognize the limits of “dialogue” with a certain type of radical in the academy, Church, and larger world. It was an insight that served him well when as a bishop and then head of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith he had to confront dissidents, movements like liberation theology, and what he would later call “the [Second Vatican] Council of the media,” which was far different than the one he and the young Karol Wojtyła had helped to shape.

For me, one personal encounter summed up much of his life and thought. I was asked to write a history of the Swiss Guard for their 500th Anniversary and gave him a copy of The Pope's Army, on May 6, 2006. There was a crowd around us, but he took the book between his hands, almost caressing it the way a book-lover does, began paging through it looking at particular chapters, and said, “This is wonderful, now I can read about these guards that protect me.”

By the way, though we still need to know more about his resignation, the Swiss Guards told me at the time that, among other things, he was physically exhausted to an extent painful to see.

I've always thought that taking the name Benedict — one among sixteen of that name — was a sign of many things he believed about his whole life. Benedictus, “blessed” to be sure, to have been born who and where he was, and over a long life. Benedictus, in the sense of continuity with Benedict XV, who almost a century earlier dealt with World War I and its aftermath throughout the globe. But finally Benedictus, even as pope, because — in spite of great learning — just a simple Christian in the long line stretching back to Jesus Himself.

The Greatest Scholar of My Lifetime by Anthony Esolen

I thank God for the life and the work of Joseph Ratzinger, Pope Benedict XVI, the greatest Catholic scholar of my lifetime, a man deeply learned not only in theology and philosophy, but in arts and letters — and the history of mankind. The true theologian is he who prays, and Pope Benedict was a man of constant prayer, who did what he could to make it more likely that the members of his flock would pray — would have the opportunity, and would benefit from the encouragement, to enter into the heart of prayer.

All that he ever wrote or said about the Mass, it seems to me, was prompted by his profound devotion to that consummate prayer, and his care to guard it against what would derogate from it, dull it, or deform it so that it would be rather an arena for merely human performance and its arbitrary and shifting tastes.

I have profited much by his works, but I shall always remember the message that an alarmed atheist friend sent me after Benedict's now-famous speech at Regensburg: “What is Benedict thinking?” My friend was alarmed because he did not understand what the pope was saying, and how could he, from the foolish reports that were flying about, accusing the pope of bigotry against Islam?

The pope stood as what I called the last true liberal in Europe, defending what Maritain called “the range of reason,” not limiting it to empirical tests and measurements, or to the windswept deserts of abstract logic, but declaring its power to reveal moral truths, to speak to every feature of a human life, seeing reason as a beacon to illuminate what is good, true, and beautiful.

Benedict was thus issuing an invitation, a plea. And every time he was called on to defend Catholic teaching, he did so because he understood that failure would be like shutting a door in the faces of those who seek the Truth. He was not “God's rottweiler.” He was never bad-tempered, as his critics were. He never spoke evil of others, as they often spoke evil of him.

Perhaps it is a mark of the Church's Divine origin that almost everything people have said about the last several popes has been the direct opposite of the Truth. Paul VI was not a hide-bound moral conservative, but a rather timid liberal who, when the crisis came, would not betray the truth. John Paul II was not an authoritarian, but a kindly and lenient man whom wicked and deceitful churchmen took terrible advantage of, while slandering him, as spoiled children will.

Benedict was not arrogant, but eminently charitable to his opponents, and, like Thomas Aquinas, he would state their case better than they themselves could do, though they never took the trouble to engage him in true scholarly debate. I think they knew better than to dare to try it.

May the angels lead him into Paradise.

A Reluctant, Consequential Pope by Fr. Gerald E. Murray

Benedict XVI's almost eight-year pontificate was consequential in many ways. He was a natural successor to his close friend John Paul II. He fulfilled expectations that he would foster and advance JP II's efforts to revitalize and strengthen the Church, which had been wounded by misguided attempts to turn the Second Vatican Council into a blueprint for a Brave New Church in which just about everything would be up for grabs. Benedict promoted the idea of the “hermeneutic of continuity”; Vatican II was to be understood and implemented in complete harmony with the rest of Church history and teaching.

One of his most important acts was to attempt to put to rest the post-Conciliar liturgical conflicts. Benedict's decision to grant greater freedom for the celebration of the traditional Latin Mass was the fruit of his love for the form of the sacred liturgy that he had experienced in his parish church as a boy, and of his heartfelt desire to reconcile the followers of Archbishop Marcel Lefebvre. He rejected the arguments of those who saw appreciation for the Church's ancient rites as mere nostalgia or as stubbornness born of a fear of change.

Among many other things, Benedict will be remembered for writing: "What earlier generations held as sacred, remains sacred and great for us too, and it cannot be all of a sudden entirely forbidden or even considered harmful. It behooves all of us to preserve the riches which have developed in the Church's faith and prayer, and to give them their proper place."

His most consequential decision was to step down from the Throne of Peter in February 2013. The weight of the papal office upon his shoulders was heavy indeed, made even more onerous by the various intrigues and crises in the Roman Curia. Acutely aware of the massive problems in the Curia, he did not see himself as capable at age 85 of cleaning house. Benedict was first and foremost a theology professor. Not many professors want to become the college president, and even fewer possess the gifts and stamina required in such a job.

Benedict was a reluctant pope who acceded to his election in 2005 as an act of obedience to the Will of God expressed by the vote of the cardinals. Yet he never made the necessary full plunge into reforming and redirecting the Roman Curia. His resignation was an understandable decision to take up at last his long-desired retirement from responsibility for administering the affairs of the Church. He wanted to prayerfully read, study, contemplate and write. That was his lifelong passion, which he saw as his most effective way of serving the Lord.

The greatest legacies of Joseph Ratzinger are his magnificent theological and spiritual writings, the fruit of his exemplary faith and devotion to Christ. For this we are most grateful, even as we speculate on what might have been if he had remained at the helm of the Barque of Peter.

The Rev. Gerald E. Murray, J.C.D. is a canon lawyer and the pastor of Holy Family Church in New York City.

In Appreciation by Thomas G. Weinandy, OFM, Cap.

What I appreciated most about Pope Benedict XVI, a virtue that he manifested throughout his life, was his quiet humility. He was never a boisterous man who pushed himself into the limelight. Rather, his calm, unassuming presence brought to every situation a reassuring strength that all would be done well and in accordance with the Holy Spirit's will. This humility was founded, not upon Benedict's intellectual acumen, but upon his firmness of faith in the Gospel, a faith that was expressed in the Church's Magisterial Teaching and Her ecclesial Theological Tradition. Benedict was but a humble servant of Jesus Christ, his Lord and Savior.

That said, all would acknowledge, and most would praise, Benedict's intellectual ability, a gift that is seen in academic work. To this day, his Introduction to Christianity continues to be read by appreciative students and members of the theological academy. Likewise, his Spirit of the Liturgy is a foundational text for appreciating and understanding the Church's liturgy that has come down to us through the ages. Every priest and seminarian should be required to read and study this work. It would help alleviate much of the rancor that exists in our present "liturgical wars." His sound learning and wise counsel would calmly prevail.

Both before and after his election as pope, Joseph Ratzinger bore the slings and arrows that were hurled at him by many within and outside the Church. Members of the secular and ecclesial liberal elite media were, and still are, relentless in their criticism and in their characterization of him as an unyielding, "rigid" conservative. Such rancor towards Benedict, however, merely makes evident the lack of faith among many of his critics, as well as simultaneously highlighting his own steadfastness in the Faith.

Benedict, as a person, as an academic, as an archbishop, and as the pope was and remains a light in the darkness of our present world. His light will continue to shine even now when he has passed from this world into his heavenly reward. There, with all of the Saints, he will give glory to God the Father, in union with Jesus, the risen incarnate Son, in communion with the love of the Holy Spirit.

Thomas G. Weinandy, OFM, a prolific writer and one of the most prominent living theologians, is a former member of the Vatican's International Theological Commission.

January Birthdays

Happy Birthday!

May God richly bless you on your special day.
It will be our privilege to remember you at the altar during the celebration of Holy Mass as we offer the Victim.
